

Outstanding Undergrad Credits Teacher for Inspiration

Bradley Feltham, CCARM Research Assistant, was recently recognized as an outstanding undergraduate student in the Faculty of Agriculture and Food Sciences at U of M, and in-turn, he formally recognized his supervisor, Dr. Miyoung Suh, for teaching excellence at the 2019 Student-Teacher Recognition Reception. The annual event celebrates the teacher-student dynamic so imperative for long-term success.

“No words can describe the dedication she provides to her students,” commented Feltham during his speech at the event. “Dr. Suh has been one of the most influential figures in my career in academia, igniting my love for research. Teachers like Dr. Suh deserve credit for the awards their students receive because no amount or type of award can be given for what they do – it is absolutely priceless.”

Congratulations!
